Saigon, Feb. 26—Peer DeSilva, CIA chief in Viet Nam, flew to Washington today to report on the situation here. He was expected to confer with CIA Director John McCone on the recent coup attempt which found the intelligence agency napping.

DeSilva's trip, described as for routine consultations, was expected to last 10 days.

On the war front, U.S. jets today bombed densely wooded Viet Cong positions 60 miles northeast of Saigon for the sixth straight day. One report said extra explosions indicated that the B-57s may have hit Communist ammunition dumps.
